General Investment Climate

1st October 2023 - 31st March 2024

General overview

Economic context

The stock markets got off to a great start in 2023, and there was improvement in a number of economic indicators.

Over the summer, however, we saw steadily deteriorating indicators. Initially, manufacturing showed some weakness, but the service sector then followed suit, too. This was mainly noticeable in Europe, where growth rates were also close to zero. Lower energy prices caused a sharp fall in headline inflation, but core inflation remained high, prompting central banks to keep raising interest rates. Oil prices rose steeply in the third quarter of 2023, reflecting fears that interest rates will remain high for a long time. Meanwhile, another armed conflict erupted in the Middle East. This increased upward pressure on oil and gas prices for a while. However, a further escalation has so far failed to materialise, and economic realities are once more prevailing.

Higher interest rates and weaker economic data ushered in a downturn on the equity and bond markets over the summer and bottomed out in October. Central banks eventually paused the hikes in interest rates. This gave rise to renewed speculation that interest rates might fall faster after all, prompting a spectacular year-end rally on the markets. Although interest rates began to rise again in early 2024, equity markets have continued their upward path, while bonds have been marking time since then.

The latest economic data clearly show the dominance of the United States ("US") economy. While the fourth-quarter growth figures remained weak in the euro area, they far exceeded expectations in the US. Economic growth in the US in the first quarter of 2024 looks promising, too.

Monetary policy

After the US Federal Reserve ("Fed") first raised interest rates by 25 basis points ("bps") in March 2022, further rate hikes have followed since June 2022. Fed Chairman Jerome Powell announced to central bankers at the Economic Symposium in Jackson Hole in August 2022 that he would do everything in his power to curb inflation, no matter the impact on the economy and households. He proved to be as good as his word and raised key rates sharply. Where in the past interest rates have been raised in small steps, this time the Fed hiked interest rates several times in 0.75% increments. The persistently high core inflation prompted a steady series of sharp interest rate hikes. This policy was recently paused, but the Fed is retaining the option of further increases if this should prove necessary. The Fed says it is 'data dependent' and is still holding off on any interest rate cuts for now. At the end of the reporting period, the US key rate was unchanged at 5.5%.

In Europe, the European Central Bank ("ECB") stressed in 2022 that the jump in inflation in the euro area would be temporary. However, this did not last long, and it soon announced that the purchase programme would be discontinued in June 2022. Interest rates were raised for the first time in July 2022, by 50 bps. In Europe, too, rates were systematically raised in 2022 and again in 2023. At the end of the reporting period, the European deposit rate stood at 4%. Interest rate hikes have now also been paused in Europe, and we are waiting for the first interest rate cut.

Staff at the two central banks are meanwhile giving out mixed signals. During the period of high inflation that followed the Covid pandemic, there appeared to be virtual unanimity among the central banks on the need to fight inflation by raising interest rates sharply. That unanimity is gradually evaporating. As always, the timing of any further interest rate cuts by the European and US central banks remains uncertain. While the market is banking on an initial rate cut for Europe in the second quarter of this year, the strong US economy is causing market researchers to question the timing of an initial rate cut in the US, which may now be postponed.

Japan saw a slight rate increase for the first time in a long time. Japanese inflation is still slightly above target. Consequently, the yen's exchange rate has often faced speculation in recent months, in anticipation of a possible change in interest rate policy. However, the interest rate policy adjustment did nothing to support the yen, which continues to perform poorly.

Currency markets

The euro gained 2.05% against the USD during the reporting period. The euro rose by 0.56% against the CHF and fell by 1.36% against the pound sterling. The euro even gained 3.39% against the Japanese yen, as the changes in Japan's rate policy were not as significant as expected.

Stock markets

Equity markets enjoyed a good rally in the spring of 2023, driven by the opportunities created by generative artificial intelligence ("AI"). After a sharp fall in the autumn, most indices ended the year on a positive note, and the upward trend continued into the new year. Over the last six months, the global index has risen by 17.79% in euro terms.

Among traditional markets, US shares gained 20.91% in euro terms during the reporting period. In the second quarter, new developments around generative AI captured investors' attention, who eagerly hoovered up US shares. After an earlier period of sharp increases, long-term interest rates eased again at the end of the reporting period. This drove up prices of growth-oriented shares, chiefly in the US.

The euro area, where many economic data points are stuck at low levels, still gained 18.81% during the reporting period. Falling interest rates and the ensuing year-end rally also proved beneficial for European shares, and the positive sentiment continued in the first quarter of 2024. Japan, helped by the low yen, also benefited, gaining 17.75% over the past six months.

The picture for shares from Emerging Markets ("EM") (countries or regions that are expected to experience rapid economic growth to make up their lag with the West) is a mixed one at the present time. The lifting of the zero-Covid policy at the start of 2023 initially provided a shot in the arm for the Chinese stock market, but despite this, the Chinese stock market still lost -8.14% over the reporting period as the initial surge after the economy reopened was not sustained. Problems in the real estate sector and increased concerns about local government debt continue to worry investors. The lack of adequate stimulus measures by the Chinese government did nothing to help sentiment around Chinese shares. Although some data points appear to be improving, recovery is off the table for the foreseeable future.

Things are going better in India, where shares posted gains of no less than 16.37% over the past six months. Latin America, too, posted a strong performance (23.55%).

The rally was evenly spread across the different sectors. Cyclical stocks performed well, enabling the Materials sector to gain 11.42% over the past six months, for example. Industrials did much better, recording healthy gains of 21.12%.

Financials gained 20.49% over the past six months, as financial institutions benefited from the higher interest rates. The upward revision of the economic growth outlook – especially in the US in the third and fourth quarters – is also good news, as it reduces the probability of defaults. Many economists seem to be taking a soft landing for the economy as the baseline scenario.

Over the past six months, Consumer Discretionary sectors rose by 14.01%, reflecting continuing strong consumption and obviously boosted by the end-of-year sales figures.

Consumer Staples, which are typically defensive sectors, gained 6.03%. Corporate earnings forecasts are gradually improving. Utilities (+10.2%) also managed to deliver a strong performance.

By contrast, Health Care, another defensive sector, bucked the trend by posting a more positive result (+11.15%). A few drugs from two players are attracting all the attention. Their diabetes medication also seems to be able to treat a variety of other ailments. Meanwhile, the valuation of the sector has returned to normal from its elevated levels, making it a more interesting proposition once again. The outlook is not bad, either, and the pipeline is well stocked with new products.

The IT and Communications sectors (+29.13% and +19.37%, respectively) were dominated by a few very large companies, which were able to take full advantage of the hype created around AI. However, that fantasy was perpetuated by strong corporate results. They were accordingly among the best-performing sectors for this reporting period.

Bond markets

US and euro area bond yields have recently undergone renewed major volatility, mainly on the back of the US banking crisis in the spring of 2023 and expectations that the central banks would soon adjust their key rates. That adjustment did not materialise, however. Although global inflation has fallen back somewhat recently, core inflation still remains above central banks' target levels. This has left them with no other choice but to keep the monetary reins tight for the foreseeable future. This realisation is also permeating bond markets, and long-term yields are continuing their upward movement in response. This is not a smooth process; volatility is the buzzword, and we are consequently seeing wild swings on long-term rates.

The Fed's key rate has been raised from 0.125% to 5.5% in a series of increments since March 2022. The ECB has also raised the deposit rate from -0.5% to 4% since July 2022. The central banks' priority remains fighting high inflation, and they are not allowing themselves to be distracted by the risk of a recession or financial instability. These central banks' key rates may now have peaked.

Credit premiums are falling further and are now -0.39% lower than at the beginning of the reporting period.

In the US, ten-year government bonds are now yielding -0.37% less than at the beginning of the reporting period. The lower interest rates have caused German government paper to fall by -0.54%.

Bonds generally recorded healthy gains during the reporting period. Bonds with short maturities rose by 2.8%, while those with long maturities gained 7.31%. The overall gain for a broad basket across all maturities was 6.36%. High-grade corporate bonds also posted positive returns (+6%), as did growth market bonds in local currency, which gained 4.48% in euro terms. Bonds issued by companies with weaker credit ratings ("High Yield") also delivered very healthy returns (+7.25%). Inflation expectations were able to pick up somewhat on the back of rallying commodity prices, slightly driving up inflation-linked bonds during the reporting period (+4.61%).

Outlook

Economic context

Economic conditions are still uncertain as the impact of the post-Covid reopening on Western economies slowly fades and the effects of stimulus policies during the pandemic give way to a strict monetary policy aimed at fighting inflation. On the other hand, money is still flowing into the economy in response to several new fiscal policy measures – often linked to sustainable infrastructure – and that is creating an imbalance. The risk of a deep recession has disappeared, and the market is assuming a very soft landing for Western economies. That said, government budgets got seriously out of hand fairly quickly, but that is no cause for concern for the market for the time being.

Despite steadily increasing interest rates and inflation figures not seen in 40 years, the economy has so far held up quite well, due in part to a very buoyant labour market and continuing strong consumer spending. The highest inflation levels are now obviously also behind us, and prices are moving steadily towards 2%. The military conflict in Ukraine as well as in the Middle East, with (temporarily) much higher energy prices as a result, together with a 'mild' banking crisis in early 2023, did not knock the economy completely off the rails. However, most economists still expect that, following an inevitable slowdown, strict interest rate policies could result in several quarters of weaker economic growth in the first half of 2024. Weak figures in the manufacturing and service sectors are the first harbingers of this. The signals coming from the US are mixed. The labour market remains quite strong in historical terms. Figures in the manufacturing and service sectors seem to be recovering, though the former is volatile. However, higher interest rates work through into the economy only slowly. Although mortgage rates have fallen from their peak, they are still high. That could put further pressure on household budgets.

Nonetheless, the outlook for corporate earnings may be a little overly optimistic. The fourth quarter delivered solid figures in terms of US earnings growth, although this could be attributed almost entirely to the major technology companies. Europe had a much weaker quarter, a trend that is expected to continue in the coming period. Projected earnings growth in the US for the first quarter, at least, is still positive but not particularly high, driven by major technology companies. Earnings appear to be still on the decrease in Europe. Consequently, the bar for both regions is set fairly low and we might yet be in for a positive surprise.

Bond markets also struggled to find a consistent direction for a while. However, the easing of interest rates during the last quarter of 2023 put bond markets into profit. However, with interest rates rising since the new year, the bond markets have since shed some of those gains. Central banks are expected to cut interest rates, probably starting in Europe. This should also support bond prices in the course of the year. In the meantime, we can enjoy an attractive current return.

Meanwhile, the prices of some commodities such as gold, copper and even oil have also picked up strongly since the start of the year. This could still – temporarily – put upward pressure on inflation figures over the coming months.

Because of the volatility of the interest rates, earnings figures that are not broadly spread across sectors, and the expectation that economic growth will be somewhat less robust over the next few quarters, our investments are currently fairly balanced. We are accordingly neutrally positioned in both equities and bonds.

Monetary policy

The Fed and ECB have already raised interest rates very sharply. The market now seems to be betting on a first interest rate cut at the end of the second quarter of 2024. Given the weaker economic picture in Europe compared to the US, the ECB is likely to be the first to lower interest rates. Consequently, the market is expecting the ECB's rate cut in June, while that of the Fed will probably not be until September.

The impact of rate hikes on the cost of financing home loans and instalment loans still has households worried, however. Although the fall in interest rates is also trickling down into home loans, rates still remain higher than what most consumers have been used to over the past decade.

Currency markets

We expect the USD to weaken slightly over the remainder of the year. We are projecting a euro-USD exchange rate of around 1.09 by the end of 2024.

Financial markets

The risk of a deep recession does seem to be completely off the table. The results from major technology companies propelled the markets, but other sectors were unable to match expectations. We are therefore now neutrally positioned in our share investments. We regularly make tactical switches to take advantage of the momentum.

Bond markets remain in the grip of interest rate movements and have recently been particularly volatile as a result. The rapid fall in interest rates in the last two months of 2023 was followed by a sluggish rise in interest rates since early 2024. Bonds are still offering attractive current returns, which can provide a useful buffer in an investment portfolio. This is enabling bonds to resume their role as a safe haven. Here again, we are maintaining a neutral stance.

As always, we are holding a limited cash position to respond to opportunities as they arise. Cash is currently also delivering a healthy net return.

Stock markets

US job growth remains surprisingly strong. Inflation is cooling further, but core inflation remains too high. The strong labour market is pushing up wages as well as boosting purchasing power for households. This means that the Fed will not be readily tempted to cut interest rates sharply, although there is talk of some rate cuts later this year. That said, growth in the US was surprisingly strong in both the third and the fourth quarter of 2023, and looks set to exceed 2% in the first quarter of 2024.

In the euro area, too, core inflation remains high, also forcing the ECB to maintain a strict monetary policy. Nevertheless, the weak figures in the manufacturing sector in particular may prompt the ECB to make its first interest rate cut in June. We are therefore maintaining a fairly defensive positioning in the equity strategy for the time being, but make regular tactical adjustments.

At regional level, the portfolio is relatively well balanced. We are maintaining a neutral stance on Emerging Asia and are more cautious on China. Within Asia, we are still positive towards the Pacific region, which consists mainly of Japanese companies. This region has decidedly defensive qualities and is benefiting from the recovery of the economy in Emerging Asia. The cheap yen is an advantage for Japanese exporting companies. The recent first interest rate hike in years did not significantly impact the level of the yen. Japan's policy remains very supportive.

In the major Western economic centres, our regional preference depends mainly on the sectors we choose. As a result, our current positioning in North America is slightly underweight. We have a neutral stance on the euro area. Europe excluding the Economic and Monetary Union ("EMU"), on the other hand, is being bolstered by the increased presence of more defensive industries, leading us to recommend an overweight position for this region.

Within the EMU, although we are more positive for small and medium-sized enterprises, we are maintaining our neutral stance for now.

Within the sectors, we are underweight in cyclical sectors, especially those linked to manufacturing. We are invested below benchmark weight in both the Materials and Industrial sectors. We are also invested below the benchmark weight in the Transport and Automotive sectors.

We are neutrally positioned in Consumer Discretionary sectors, however, given the continuing consumer strength helped by a tight labour market.

We take a positive view of financial stocks, for both banks and insurers, both of which are benefiting from higher interest rates and are not overvalued.

We are neutral on the strongly US-linked Technology sector, though with more pronounced positions in some subsectors. We are underweighting Hardware due to lower near-term growth prospects. The strong AI-related rally had made the semiconductor subsector much more expensive. However, rising interest rates put an end to that this summer, prompting us to step in again, at much better prices. This allowed us to further boost the position to overweight. Within the Technology sector, we are also maintaining a heavily overweight position in software companies. Its pricing power means this subsector is less impacted by inflation. We have a neutral stance on media companies.

We are continuing to focus on defensive sectors. Health Care is a defensive sector that has an interesting pipeline. Moreover, new developments involving diabetes medication also look promising for other applications. We are overweight mainly in pharma companies, which are also no longer as expensive as they were a while ago.

We are also overweight in Consumer Staples. These companies, which include food and beverage producers as well as household and personal products manufacturers, provide stable income in uncertain times. We are overweighting food and beverage companies. We are taking a neutral stance on Utilities. We are now also neutral on Real Estate, after high interest rates previously forced us to take a negative view. Interest rates do now seem to have peaked. If interest rates ease further, that will be good news for the Real Estate sector.

Bond markets

Economic growth is still weak in Europe, while expectations for the US have been revised upwards. High inflation forced central banks to raise key rates, creating a restrictive monetary environment. Bonds, however, are seen as a safe haven. Positions are built up whenever fears of recession increase, which causes yields to fall. We have seen this happening recently. In this complex situation, it is unclear whether investors will focus more on the dip in growth figures, inflation or a potential reversal of central banks' interest rate policy. Against this backdrop, we still expect to see fluctuations in bond yields, although German 10-year yields may have now peaked. We think the 10-year yields in the US, too, have peaked.

We have a neutral stance on the bond allocation. Following the sharp rise in both interest rates and credit premiums since early 2022, bonds are once again attractive after a long period of very low returns. Even after the recent fall in interest rates, the returns are still attractive. For the time being, we prefer high-grade corporate bonds to government bonds, but have become slightly less negative than previously towards the latter category. The yield spread versus corporate bonds has narrowed considerably, improving the risk-return ratio for government bonds. We currently have a slightly negative view on growth market bonds. The High Yield theme offers attractive returns, and we currently have a small position within our neutral weighting. However, we are maintaining a long-term position in green, social and sustainable bonds. These investments form a cornerstone of the bond portfolio.

The maturities have been regularly adjusted in recent months, and we are now positioned slightly shorter than, but close to, the benchmark maturity. Considerable fluctuations in interest rates are likely to continue for a while. We therefore regularly make tactical adjustments to our position based on what is happening to interest rates. Monitoring data closely and continuing to navigate these choppy waters successfully will also make the difference in the coming months.

KBC BONDS INCOME FUND

Investment policy and outlook

from 1st October 2023 to 31st March 2024

This sub-fund seeks to outperform the benchmark that consists of investment grade government bonds, and multiple currencies.

In 2023 inflation in both Europe and US declined from its peak but stayed well above the target level of 2%. The ECB and the Fed continued to tighten their monetary policy in order to reduce inflation. In the summer of 2023 however, they stopped hiking policy rates. The Fed raised its Fed fund target rate last time in July to a level of 5.375% and the final hike of the deposit rate of ECB was in September to 4.50%. Since then, their policy shifted to reducing the balance sheet and keeping the policy rates higher for longer. The focus for the markets shifted as well to predicting the timing and the speed of the rate cuts that will follow a drop of the inflation towards the goal of the central banks. The US market is clearly leading the way in this. As the view of higher central bank rates took hold, yields increased to a peak of 2.96% for the German 10-year yield early October 2023. In the fourth quarter of 2024 inflation surprised to the downside. Markets starting pricing in more and earlier rate cuts. In the US at the start of October 2023 almost zero cuts were priced in for June 2024, but by Christmas 2023 more than three cuts were expected. This drove yields down, also in Europe to a low of 1.89% for the German 10-year rate. As inflation was more persistent and economic growth more resilient, at least in the US, these cuts were priced out again, raising the yield back to levels above 2.40% since February 2024.

Current economic evolutions that are important for this sub-fund is the current strength in the US Economy coupled with the stagnating inflation there. In the EU there is a steadier progress to the 2% inflation target. The same is the case for the United Kingdom ("UK") where inflation is decreasing, and unemployment is ticking up. The outlier is Japan where inflation is slowly moving up towards the Bank of Japan ("BOJ") target.

Because of the current scenario and the economical environment we are in, Europe bonds are favored over US bonds, where the mantra 'higher for longer' is becoming louder and louder again. Japan is disliked at the current level, both for the outlook on the reaction curve of the BOJ and the low yield that can be gathered there.

Investment policy and outlook

from 1st October 2023 to 31st March 2024

This sub-fund seeks to outperform the benchmark that consists of investment grade government bonds, and multiple currencies.

In 2023 inflation in both Europe and the US declined from its peak but stayed well above the target level of 2%. The ECB and the Fed continued to tighten their monetary policy in order to reduce inflation. In the summer of 2023 however, they stopped hiking policy rates. The Fed raised its Fed fund target rate last time in July to a level of 5.375% and the final hike of the deposit rate of ECB was in September to 4.50%. Since then, their policy shifted to reducing the balance sheet and keeping the policy rates higher for longer. The focus for the markets shifted as well to predicting the timing and the speed of the rate cuts that will follow a drop of the inflation towards the goal of the central banks. The US market is clearly leading the way in this. As the view of higher central bank rates took hold, yields increased to a peak of 2.96% for the German 10-year yield early October 2023. In the fourth quarter of 2024 inflation surprised to the downside. Markets starting pricing in more and earlier rate cuts. In the US at the start of October 2023 almost zero cuts were priced in for June 2024, but by Christmas 2023 more than three cuts were expected. This drove yields down, also in Europe to a low of 1.89% for the German 10-year rate. As inflation was more persistent and economic growth more resilient, at least in the US, these cuts were priced out again, raising the yield back to levels above 2.40% since February 2024.

Current economic evolutions that are important for this sub-fund is the current strength in the US Economy coupled with the stagnating inflation there. In the EU there is a steadier progress to the 2% inflation target. The same is the case for the UK where inflation is decreasing, and unemployment is ticking up. The outlier is Japan where inflation is slowly moving up towards the BOJ target.

Because of the current scenario and the economical environment we are in, Europe bonds are favored over US bonds, where the mantra 'higher for longer' is becoming louder and louder again. Japan is disliked at the current level, both for the outlook on the reaction curve of the BOJ and the low yield that can be gathered there.

KBC BONDS HIGH INTEREST

Investment policy and outlook

from 1st October 2023 to 31st March 2024

Investment Policy summary

The KBC BONDS HIGH INTEREST sub-fund aims to generate a return by investing at least 2/3rds of its assets in bonds of companies and/or governments and denominated mainly in currencies yielding a return that is considerably higher than the return on strong currencies. Currencies delivering a return that is at least 0.5% higher than the return on bonds issued by the German Federal Republic can be deemed to be high-yield currencies.

Market review

In 2023 inflation in both Europe and the US declined from its peak but stayed well above the target level of 2%. The central banks of the ECB and the Fed continued to tighten their monetary policy in order to reduce inflation. In the summer of 2023 however, they stopped hiking policy rates. The Fed raised its Fed fund target rate the last time in July to a level of 5.375% and the final hike of the deposit rate of ECB was in September to 4.50%. Since then, their policy shifted to reducing the balance sheet and keeping the policy rates higher for longer. The focus for the markets shifted as well to predicting the timing and the speed of the rate cuts that will follow a drop of the inflation towards the goal of the central banks. The US market is clearly leading the way in this. As the view of higher central bank rates took hold, yields increased to a peak of 2.96% for the German 10-year yield early October 2023. In the fourth quarter of 2024 inflation surprised to the downside. Markets starting pricing in more and earlier rate cuts. In the US at the start of October 2023 almost zero cuts were priced in for June 2024, but by Christmas 2023 more than three cuts were expected. This drove yields down, also in Europe to a low of 1.89% for the German 10-year rate. As inflation was more persistent and economic growth more resilient, at least in the US, these cuts were priced out again, raising the yield back to levels above 2.40%.

Emerging bond markets followed the lead of US Treasuries although the central bank policy differed markedly. In Latin America for example policy rate has gradually reduced but they start from a (much) higher level. In Central Europe the central banks follow a similar path. In Asia the PBOC lowered its key rates to stimulate the economy but in other countries, rates remained unchanged.

Future investment policy

Our Economist expect a first cut in the deposit rate by the ECB in June 2024. They expect another three rate cuts before the end of 2024 reducing the deposit rate to 3% from its current level of 4%. In this scenario the German 10-year rate should stay around 2.30% for the remainder of the year and could slightly increase next year. At the start of April 2024, the slightly more dovish with a first cut only fully priced in for July and only a bit more than two additional cuts before the end of 2024. The German 10-year rate is still moving within the zone of 2.20%-2.50% where we have a neutral view on duration or rate sensitivity.

We will also be looking out for opportunities in EM where yields remain in many cases well above developed market yields, despite the sound growth and inflation and the good central bank credentials.

KBC BONDS EMERGING MARKETS

Investment policy and outlook

from 1st October 2023 to 31st March 2024

The sub-fund invests primarily in USD denominated bonds issued by borrowers that operate in EM or whose head office is located in EM. This mainly include the markets of Southeast Asia, Latin America, Eastern Europe and Africa.

The performance of the sub-fund is driven by two factors: the evolution of US government bond yields ('core yields') and the credit risk premiums ('credit spread') EM issuers have to pay on top of these. In the period under review, the sub-fund posted a strong return, as both core yields and credit spreads declined. Most of the decline in credit spreads took place in the fourth quarter of 2023, as the market reversed from fears of an imminent recession to a higher likelihood of a soft landing in the US, helped by a dovish change in tone at the Fed.

Despite recent setbacks in the disinflation process, our base scenario remains quite benign for risky assets, with core yields expected to come somewhat down while economic growth would still remain ok. The sub-fund is positioned close to neutral versus benchmark, with a slight skew towards higher yielding segments.

Investment policy and outlook

from 1st October 2023 to 31st March 2024

2023 ended on a high note for investment-grade eur-denominated credit. From end of October 2023 credit spreads enjoyed a nice rally, going hand in hand with a substantial decrease of long-term interest rates. This resulted in very nice absolute returns at the end of 2023. Going into the new year, the rates rally did not last however as market participants pondered the odds and extent of central bank easing. Credit spreads however shrugged-off inflation worries in first quarter of 2024 and continued to decline at a nice pace, resulting in positive excess returns and slightly positive absolute returns. Within investment grade credit, we did see the spread gap between financial issuers and their non-financial counterparts tighten considerably. At the same time subordinated debt outperformed senior parts of the capital structure.

Investment policy

During the reporting period, the interest rate sensitivity of the sub-fund has remained in a neutral range versus the benchmark but most of the time slightly above the benchmark. The conviction currently lacks to take either side of the duration spectrum.

On the credit sensitivity of the portfolio, we have more conviction to stay above the reference index. Given our base case macroeconomic scenario, we remain constructive on credit but decided towards the end of the reporting period to slightly scale back our overweight and take some profit after the relentless rally in risk-bearing assets. Unless the market narrative would change substantially, i.e. inflation being more sticky and central banks being less accommodative, we remain to stay overweight here.

KBC BONDS CONVERTIBLES

Investment policy and outlook

from 1st October 2023 to 31st March 2024

KBC BONDS CONVERTIBLES seeks a return by investing at least 2/3rds of its assets in a global selection of convertible bonds or corporate and/or government bonds with a similar performance to convertible assets by using a combination of derivatives and of bonds.

In 2023 inflation in both Europe and the US declined from its peak but stayed well above the target level of 2%. The ECB and the Fed continued to tighten their monetary policy in order to reduce inflation. In the summer of 2023 however, they stopped hiking policy rates. The Fed raised its Fed fund target rate the last time in July to a level of 5.375% and the final hike of the deposit rate of ECB was in September to 4.50%. Since then, their policy shifted to reducing the balance sheet and keeping the policy rates higher for longer. The focus for the markets shifted as well to predicting the timing and the speed of the rate cuts that will follow a drop of the inflation towards the goal of the central banks. The US market is clearly leading the way in this.

As the view of higher central bank rates took hold, yields increased to a peak of 2.96% for the German 10-year yield early October 2023. In the fourth quarter of 2023 inflation surprised to the downside. Markets starting pricing in more and earlier rate cuts. In the US at the start of October 2023 almost zero cuts were priced in for June 2024, but by Christmas 2023 more than three cuts were expected. This drove yields down, also in Europe to a low of 1.89% for the German 10-year rate. As inflation was more persistent and economic growth more resilient, at least in the US, these cuts were priced out again, raising the yield back to levels above 2.40%.

Equity markets benefitted of the perspective of future lower rates and rallied since the end of October and reached their peak at the of March.

At the end of last year, the KBC AM strategy reduced their underweight in equity back to zero. In line with this strategy, the sub-fund moved from and negative delta (equity sensitivity) compared to the benchmark to a neutral stance. We started the new reporting period with this neutral view.

The KBC BONDS INFLATION-LINKED BONDS compartment aims to be mainly invested in inflation linked bonds issued by governments of the Eurozone.

Market review

During the first months of the reporting period inflation rates dropped markedly due to important base effects: the steep rise in oil and gas prices from the year before leaving the index. This was the case in both Europe and the US. Financial markets grew more confident that inflation was tamed, and the hiking cycle of the central banks was soon going to be replaced by an easing cycle. This was confirmed by statements from the governor of the Fed, announcing a pivot towards lower interest rates.

Financial markets were eager to digest the good news and both nominal and real interest rates dropped markedly. The average yield of the Euro denominated inflation bond market dropped from almost 1.5% to below 1% by the end of 2023. But the new year came with some nasty inflation surprises especially in the US. Bond yields started to rise again although real rate increases in Europe were muted. Market participants remained convinced that the ECB will cut rates soon.

The strategy of the sub-fund during the reporting period was a cautious one: being underweight duration. The shorter end of the yield curve was deemed to offer a better risk/return trade off than the long end.

Future investment policy

The ECB is expected to start cutting rates in June. This will be favourable for European yields. But the negative influence of rising US government bond yields will remain a strong opposing factor. So the investment strategy will remain cautious for the time being. Higher real yields or a steeper yield curve will provide an incentive to increase duration.

Investment policy and outlook

from 1st October 2023 to 31st March 2024

Over the reporting period 10-year US yields steadily rose from 3.88% to 4.20% due to persistent inflation and rising doubt about the Fed's intention to cut rates. Credit spreads declined from 99 bps to 90 bps - in line with the good sentiment in the American stock market.

Investment policy

Throughout the reporting period the sub-fund benefited from the somewhat short duration versus the benchmark. The sub-fund was rebalanced monthly in order to replace less attractive bonds with more attractive ones.

KBC BONDS EMERGING EUROPE

Investment policy and outlook

from 1st October 2023 to 31st March 2024

The sub-fund invests primarily in bonds and debt instruments issued by borrowers in Eastern and Central Europe ("CEE") or denominated in a currency in circulation in the region.

Over the past 6 months, developments in the CEE region have been rather positive. Growth, which had been weak for some time, showed signs of bottoming out. Inflation was normalizing and falling very quickly in some countries, e.g., Hungary. The geopolitical situation was stable, with the ongoing war in Ukraine being contained. Taken together, these factors provided confidence to the major central banks in the region to start/continue their interest rate cutting cycle. By end of March 2024, policy rates were below peak levels in all of Hungary (-4.75%), Czech Republic (-1.25%) and Poland (-1%). In Romania the first cut is expected in the second quarter of this year while Turkey's determination to tackle the very high inflation problem led its central bank to increase interest rates very aggressively (+20% over the period). While these actions have mainly supported bonds, especially in the front-end of the curves, most CEE currencies however struggled given the combination of weaker growth, easing monetary cycles and overall a strong USD. The Polish Zloty stands out as a clear winner, on the back of the pro-European outcome of the elections held in October.

Looking ahead, as the cyclical activity bottoms out and interest rate levels ease further we can expect an improvement in growth, which should support currencies. As to bonds, a lot of the good news appears to be already priced-in, making the upside potential more challenging.

KBC BONDS HIGH INTEREST RESPONSIBLE INVESTING

Investment policy and outlook

from 1st October 2023 to 31st March 2024

Investment Policy summary

The KBC BONDS HIGH INTEREST RESPONSIBLE INVESTING sub-fund aims to generate a return by investing at least 2/3rds of its assets in bonds of companies and/or governments and denominated mainly in currencies yielding a return that is considerably higher than the return on strong currencies. Currencies delivering a return that is at least 0.5% higher than the return on bonds issued by the German Federal Republic can be deemed to be high-yield currencies.

Market review

In 2023 inflation in both Europe and the US declined from its peak but stayed well above the target level of 2%. The ECB and the Fed continued to tighten their monetary policy in order to reduce inflation. In the summer of 2023 however, they stopped hiking policy rates. The Fed raised its Fed fund target rate the last time in July to a level of 5.375% and the final hike of the deposit rate of ECB was in September to 4.50%. Since then, their policy shifted to reducing the balance sheet and keeping the policy rates higher for longer. The focus for the markets shifted as well to predicting the timing and the speed of the rate cuts that will follow a drop of the inflation towards the goal of the central banks. The US market is clearly leading the way in this. As the view of higher central bank rates took hold, yields increased to a peak of 2.96% for the German 10-year yield early October 2023. In the fourth quarter of 2023 inflation surprised to the downside. Markets starting pricing in more and earlier rate cuts. In the US at the start of October 2023 almost zero cuts were priced in for June 2024, but by Christmas 2023 more than three cuts were expected. This drove yields down, also in Europe to a low of 1.89% for the German 10-year rate. As inflation was more persistent and economic growth more resilient, at least in the US, these cuts were priced out again, raising the yield back to levels above 2.40%.

Emerging bond markets followed the lead of US Treasuries although the central bank policy differed markedly. In Latin America for example policy rate has gradually reduced but they start from a (much) higher level. In Central Europe the central banks follow a similar path. In Asia the Chinese central bank ("PBOC") lowered its key rates to stimulate the economy but in other countries, rates remained unchanged.

Future investment policy

Our Economist expect a first cut in the deposit rate by the ECB in June 2024. They expect another three rate cuts before the end of 2024 reducing the deposit rate to 3% from its current level of 4%. In this scenario the German 10-year rate should stay around 2.30% for the remainder of the year and could slightly increase next year. At the start of April 2024, the slightly more dovish with a first cut only fully priced in for July and only a bit more than two additional cuts before the end of 2024. The German 10-year rate is still moving within the zone of 2.20%-2.50% where we have a neutral view on duration or rate sensitivity.

We will also be looking out for opportunities in EM where yields remain in many cases well above developed market yields, despite the sound growth and inflation and the good central bank credentials.

KBC BONDS STRATEGIC ACCENTS

Investment policy and outlook

from 1st October 2023 to 31st March 2024

Investment Policy summary

The KBC BONDS STRATEGIC ACCENTS sub-fund invests at least 90% of its assets in corporate bonds, government bonds, convertible bonds, deposits, money market instruments, other debt instruments or derivatives (including bond futures, interest-rate swaps and CDS contract). The sub-fund's objective is to respond tactically to opportunities on the bond and money markets. The sub-fund is managed without a benchmark and the portfolio composition may vary significantly over time. The investment policy of the sub-fund is always directed at adjusting the combined strategy of the entire strategy bond portfolio of KBC Asset Management N.V. in the required direction.

Market review

In 2023 inflation in both Europe and the US declined from its peak but stayed well above the target level of 2%. The ECB and the Fed continued to tighten their monetary policy in order to reduce inflation. In the summer of 2023 however, they stopped hiking policy rates. The Fed raised its Fed fund target rate the last time in July to a level of 5.375% and the final hike of the deposit rate of ECB was in September to 4.50%. Since then, their policy shifted to reducing the balance sheet and keeping the policy rates higher for longer. The focus for the markets shifted as well to predicting the timing and the speed of the rate cuts that will follow a drop of the inflation towards the goal of the central banks. The US market is clearly leading the way in this. As the view of higher central bank rates took hold, yields increased to a peak of 2.96% for the German 10-year yield early October 2023. In the fourth quarter of 2024 inflation surprised to the downside. Markets starting pricing in more and earlier rate cuts. In the US at the start of October 2023 almost zero cuts were priced in for June 2024, but by Christmas 2023 more than three cuts were expected. This drove yields down, also in Europe to a low of 1.89% for the German 10-year rate. As inflation was more persistent and economic growth more resilient, at least in the US, these cuts were priced out again, raising the yield back to levels above 2.40%.

Our economists have kept their view quite steady, forecasting a first deposit rate cut in July 2024, three more cuts of 25 bps before the end of 2024 and a German 10-year rate hovering around 2.30%. We have been managing the duration of our Fixed Income portfolios dynamically. Reducing the overall duration when rates dropped below 2.30% in Germany and increasing it went above 2.40%. These movements are followed but also amplified in the Bonds Strategic accent: moving between 2 years and 8 years.

Future investment policy

Our Economists expect a first cut in the deposit rate by the ECB in June 2024. They expect another three rate cuts before the end of 2024 reducing the deposit rate to 3% from its current level of 4%. In this scenario the German 10-year rate should stay around 2.30% for the remainder of the year and could slightly increase next year. At the start of April 2024, the slightly more dovish with a first cut only fully priced in for July and only a bit more than two additional cuts before the end of 2024. The German 10-year rate is still moving within the zone of 2.20%-2.50% where we have a neutral view on duration or rate sensitivity. But when, while sticking to this scenario, the yield would rise to the top or above this range, we will increase duration. If the yields would drop to the bottom or even below the range, for instance when the markets start factoring in a higher probability that the ECB will cut before the Fed does, we will substantially lower our duration.

We will also be looking out for opportunities in the markets such as valuations of currencies or mispricing's in yield spreads between countries, currencies or in the yield curve steepness. At the end of the reporting period, we had an underweight position in Italy as the yield spread with Germany reached very low levels compared to its longer term average.

KBC BONDS STRATEGIC ACCENTS RESPONSIBLE INVESTING

Investment policy and outlook

from 1st October 2023 to 31st March 2024

Investment Policy summary

The KBC BONDS STRATEGIC ACCENTS RESPONSIBLE INVESTING sub-fund is actively managed without use of a benchmark. The sub-fund promotes a combination of environmental and social characteristics. Even though it does not have sustainable investments as an objective, it aims to invest at least 90% of its assets in assets promoting environmental or social characteristics. The investment policy of the sub-fund is always directed at adjusting the combined strategy of the entire responsible investing strategic bond portfolio of KBC Asset Management in the required direction. The sub-fund's objective is to react tactically to opportunities in bond markets and money markets. The composition of the portfolio may therefore fluctuate significantly over time.

Market review

In 2023 inflation in both Europe and the US declined from its peak but stayed well above the target level of 2%. The ECB and the Fed continued to tighten their monetary policy in order to reduce inflation. In the summer of 2023 however, they stopped hiking policy rates. The Fed raised its Fed fund target rate the last time in July to a level of 5.375% and the final hike of the deposit rate of ECB was in September to 4.50%. Since then, their policy shifted to reducing the balance sheet and keeping the policy rates higher for longer. The focus for the markets shifted as well to predicting the timing and the speed of the rate cuts that will follow a drop of the inflation towards the goal of the central banks. The US market is clearly leading the way in this. As the view of higher central bank rates took hold, yields increased to a peak of 2.96% for the German 10-year yield early October 2023. In the fourth quarter of 2024 inflation surprised to the downside. Markets starting pricing in more and earlier rate cuts. In the US at the start of October 2023 almost zero cuts were priced in for June 2024, but by Christmas 2023 more than three cuts were expected. This drove yields down, also in Europe to a low of 1.89% for the German 10-year rate. As inflation was more persistent and economic growth more resilient, at least in the US, these cuts were priced out again, raising the yield back to levels above 2.40% since February 2024.

Our Economists have kept their view quite steady, forecasting a first deposit rate cut in July 2024, three more cuts of 25 bps before the end of 2024 and a German 10-year rate hovering around 2.30%. We have been managing the duration of our Fixed Income portfolios dynamically. Reducing the overall duration when rates dropped below 2.30% in Germany and increasing it went above 2.40%. These movements are followed but also amplified in the Bonds Strategic accent: moving between 2 years and 8 years.

Future investment policy

Our Economists expect a first cut in the deposit rate by the ECB in June 2024. They expect another three rate cuts before the end of 2024 reducing the deposit rate to 3% from its current level of 4%. In this scenario the German 10-year rate should stay around 2.30% for the remainder of the year and could slightly increase next year. At the start of April 2024, the slightly more dovish with a first cut only fully priced in for July and only a bit more than two additional cuts before the end of 2024. The German 10-year rate is still moving within the zone of 2.20%-2.50% where we have a neutral view on duration or rate sensitivity. But when, while sticking to this scenario, the yield would rise to the top or above this range, we will increase duration. If the yields would drop to the bottom or even below the range, for instance when the markets start factoring in a higher probability that the ECB will cut before the Fed does, we will substantially lower our duration.

We will also be looking out for opportunities in the markets such as valuations of currencies or mispricing's in yield spreads between countries, currencies or in the yield curve steepness. At the end of the reporting period, we had an underweight position in Italy as the yield spread with Germany reached very low levels compared to its longer term average.

Investment policy and outlook

from 4th October 2023 to 31st March 2024

Typically, the sub-fund invests at least 67% of its assets in corporate bonds with a non-investment grade rating and/or in derivatives that create such exposure. The sub-fund is actively managed and does not set out to track the benchmark index.

In 2023, inflation in both Europe and the US declined from its peak but stayed well above the target level of 2%. The ECB and the Fed continued to tighten their monetary policy in order to curb inflation. In the summer of 2023 however, they stopped hiking policy rates. The Fed raised its Fed fund target rate the last time in July to a level of 5.375% and the final hike of the deposit rate of ECB was in September to 4.50%. Since then, their policy shifted to reducing the balance sheet and keeping the policy rates higher for longer. The focus for the markets shifted as well to predicting the timing and the speed of the rate cuts that will follow a drop of the inflation towards the goal of the central banks. In the fourth quarter of 2023 inflation surprised to the downside. Markets starting pricing in more and earlier rate cuts. In the US at the start of October 2023 almost zero cuts were priced in for June 2024, but by Christmas 2023 more than three cuts were expected. This drove yields down, also in Europe. Therefore, 2023 ended on a strong note for High Yield credit. From end of October 2023 credit spreads enjoyed a nice rally, going hand in hand with the interest rates momentum. This resulted in very nice absolute returns at the end of 2023. Going into the new year, the rates rally did not last however as market participants pondered the odds and extent of central bank easing. Credit spreads however shrugged-off inflation worries in the first quarter of 2024 and continued to decline at a nice pace, resulting in positive excess and absolute returns.

On the last quarter of 2023, we have been long beta and duration in the fund, which supported the good performance. We have also bet on the real estate segment which performed very well on the scenario that central banks will cut markedly in 2024. After the strong repricing of the rates by markets, at the beginning of 2024, we have reduced our duration as we thought markets went a bit ahead of themselves. With decreasing probability of the Fed cutting by June, we have also progressively reduced our beta, while still keeping it above the benchmark level, as we remain constructive.

Investment policy and outlook

from 26th October 2023 to 31st March 2024

The sub-fund invests only in EUR denominated green, social or sustainability bonds from corporate and sovereign issuers.

Over the period under review, the sub-fund posted a positive return, as European bond yields declined significantly and corporate bonds spreads compressed considerably. Most of the decline happened during the fourth quarter of 2023, helped by a dovish change in tone at the Fed and the ECB. Note that the sub-fund overweighted corporate bonds versus the benchmark and had a small long duration stance at first. Later on, when yields had dropped, duration was lowered to protect for rate increases.

Going forward it is expected that corporate bonds will keep on performing well and that despite the setbacks in the disinflation process core yields will come down somewhat. We keep on dynamically altering the duration synced with how yields are moving and keep our overweight in corporate bonds for now, but stand ready to either add or lower that allocation based on our views on the resilience of the corporate bond market.

Notes to the financial statements as at 31st March 2024

Note 1 - Significant accounting policies

a) Presentation of the financial statements

The financial statements of the SICAV are established in accordance with the legal and regulatory requirements in force and with generally accepted accounting principles in Luxembourg concerning Undertakings for Collective Investment in Transferable Securities.

b) Valuation of assets

- 1) The value of cash in hand, bills and demand notes payable and accounts receivable, prepaid expenses, received dividends and interest declared or accrued but not yet received is formed by the nominal value of such assets, unless it appears unlikely that the full value can be received at maturity, in which case the value will be determined by making such deduction as the Board of Directors of the SICAV considers appropriate to reflect the fair value thereof.
- 2) The value of all transferable securities and money market instruments traded or listed on a stock exchange or on another regulated market is determined on the basis of the last available price unless this price is not representative.
- 3) The value of transferable securities and money market instruments in portfolio on the valuation day that are not traded or listed on a stock exchange or other regulated market, and of securities and money market instruments traded or listed on a stock exchange or other regulated market where the price determined according to the stipulations of the above indent is not representative of the fair value of such transferable securities and money market instruments, will be determined on the basis of the foreseeable sale price, as estimated by the Board of Directors of the SICAV prudently and in good faith.
- 4) The money market instruments with an average residual term to maturity of less than one year are valued conservatively by using mark-to-model. The model accurately estimates the intrinsic value of the instrument based on all of the appropriate key factors. More specifically, the model includes interest rate risk and credit risk (constant spreads) for commercial papers and interest rate risk for term deposits.
- 5) The "commercial papers" are valued at acquisition cost, the difference between the nominal and the acquisition cost is recognised as interest receivable in proportion to the period of detention passed against the total length of the instrument. In case of significant changes of market conditions, the valuation of these instruments is adjusted to reflect the probable realisation value.
- 6) The value of the shares or units held in open-ended funds is based on the last net asset value available on valuation day.
- 7) If, as a result of special circumstances or features, the valuation based on the rules set out above proves to be impracticable or inaccurate, other generally accepted, verifiable valuation criteria are applied to obtain a fair value. These criteria shall be determined prudently and in good faith by the Board of Directors of the SICAV based on information or other market data. In these circumstances, the valuation of these assets is established on the basis of mathematical or financial models or other alternative methods of valuation to reflect in the financial statements their fair value at valuation date.

c) Acquisition cost of securities in the portfolio

The acquisition cost of the securities held by each sub-fund that are denominated in currencies other than the reference currency of the sub-fund is converted into this currency at the exchange rates prevailing on the date of purchase.

d) Net realised gain/(loss) on sales of securities portfolio

The realised gain or loss on sales of securities portfolio is calculated on the basis of the average acquisition cost.

e) Investment portfolio income

Interest income accrued and payable are recorded, net of any withholding tax.

A part of the interest income consist of the interest income linked to treasury inflation-protected securities.

Note 17 - Events

Since 24th February 2022, daily monitoring of operational processes and in particular of Russian and Ukrainian positions has been activated. In addition, the Investment Committee was convened on 25th and 28th February 2022, and the decision was made to reduce positions to the maximum extent possible.

However, regarding the sub-funds in scope, there is no direct exposure to Russian and/or Ukrainian positions, except for the sub-fund KBC BONDS EMERGING EUROPE. The main risk related to the Russian-Ukrainian conflict is market and performance risks, as we observe increased volatility in global financial markets. Obviously, countries, sectors and companies more closely linked to the conflict are more heavily impacted than others.

There is unrealised loss on Russian federal bonds amounted to EUR 3,067,596.14 on KBC BONDS EMERGING EUROPE sub-fund as of 31st March 2024, which represents 8.13% of total net assets.
